IMPORTANCE OF HEALTHY KIDNEYS.

Yale Readers Should Learn How To Keep The Kidneys Well

The kidneys have a big work to do. All the blood in the body is coursing through the kidneys constantly to be freed of poisonous matter. It is a heavy enough task when the kidneys are well, but a cold, chill, fever or some thoughtless exposure is likely to irritate, inflame and congest the kidneys and interrupt the purifying work.

Then the aching frequently begins and is often accompanied by some irregularity of the urine—too frequent passages, sediment or retention. Thousands testify to the wonderful merit of Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy for the kidneys only, that has been used in kidney troubles 30 years. You will make no mistake in following this Yale citizen's advice.

Jesse Bullock, farmer, R. F. D. No. 1 Yale, Mich., says: "I had a bad attack of backache some months ago and the trouble had become so severe that I could not stoop. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box at Grant Holden's Drug Store. They removed the trouble and I give them the credit for making a permanent cure. I have had no sign of kidney complaint since."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Bullock had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the church chapel and later the relatives and friends were entertained at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Davis, of 1304 Porter street.

Miss Lelia Tanner played the bridal chorus from Lohengrin as the bridal party came into the church and Mendelssohn's march as the guests were leaving.

The bride's gown was of white gabardine, combined with white satin and Venetian lace. Orange blossoms held in place her veil of tulle and lilies of the valley and white roses composed her shower bouquet. Miss Violet Davis was attired in pale blue silk trimmed with Irish point lace and she carried pink roses. Mrs. Brown wore white marquisette trimmed with tulle and her flowers were Beaufortia roses.

Letter From Edward Ohmer

Santa Ana, Calif., May 11, 1915
Mr. J. E. Walker,
Yale, Mich.

Dear Friend:—You no doubt by this time are thinking I do not intend to write you, but I haven't, so here goes.

Well, John, I will try and tell you something about this country. Don't miss paying this state a visit, you will never regret it if you do. I have bought 3 1/2 acres 1 1/2 miles from Garden Grove, while Santa Ana, Orange and Anaheim, all having a population of over 4,000, are only seven miles from us, and all connected by concrete boulevards. Ask Mr. Beers about our roads. Santa Ana is the county seat of Orange county, is our postoffice and has a population of about 20,000. We are only seven miles from the ocean and the breezes keeps it cool here in the summer time.

One can ride for miles and miles over concrete boulevards, through orange groves and English Walnut orchards and flowers of every variety. Everything lives out doors the year around. We had some frosts the fore part of the winter but nothing seemed to be injured.

We are using new potatoes from our own patch now and I did not plant till after Mr. Beers and Will returned home. We are also feasting on strawberries. They sell for 6 and 7 boxes a quarter. We bought a crate of 30 boxes for one dollar and have sold as low as 45c per crate. The Japs raise the most of them. They have them about nine months in the year, but if I remember right you don't like strawberries. Ha ha.

I am putting a few orange blossoms in this letter and you can imagine what a fine perfume comes from a grove all in bloom. Chill peppers and lima beans are grown quite extensively around here. Oranges are selling for a good price now. One man I know sold five acres for $5,000 and did not have to touch them. It is the Valencia variety that are ripe now, the Navals are about all gone.

Write me when you can. We are all well and hearty.

From your friend
Edward M. Ohmer.

A Change Of Garments

By JOHN G. LARNED

One morning Lita Giaccolli, an Italian girl aged eighteen, was placed in a railway train at Naples by her father and mother, who bade her goodbye with many kisses. She was going to Rome to visit an aunt. The compartment she entered was occupied by one person only—a man. He was small and clean shaven, and the train had not gone far into the country when he began to notice Lita, as if taking note of her height and weight. Presently he said:

"Signorina, will you please take off your hat and give it to me?"

Lita looked at him as if she did not comprehend his meaning. The man jerked her hat off her head and put his own on hers. By this time she was thoroughly frightened and made no resistance. The man forced her to exchange her outer garments with him, and when this was done he pulled a veil down over his face.

"When we make a stop," he said, "I will get out—that is, unless I see danger. If you betray me I will kill you. I am a bandit. I have been making a rich haul in Naples. The police got on to my being there, and I am surprised that they have permitted me to get out of the city. Indeed, I suspect some game on their part, and I should not wonder if they were on the lookout for me."

Lita was thoroughly cowed. Indeed, it was all she could do to keep from fainting. But she kept up till the train reached the first stop, hoping then to be relieved of him. When the train pulled up at the station the man looked out, but drew back immediately, and Lita saw that she would not be rid of him. The conductor came to the door of the compartment and put a woman into it. Lita noticed that she tipped him for finding her a seat. The newcomer was a comfort to the poor girl, though she wished she had been a man. She noticed, however, that the woman was big and strong, while the bandit was small, though wiry.

The train had scarcely pulled out of the station when the new passenger began to look scrutinizingly at Lita. As for the man, he leaned back in a corner with the veil over his face, and no one would have had reason to suspect that he was not a woman.

"Where are you going, signor?" asked the woman of Lita in a coarse voice.

"To Rome, signora."

The woman looked intently at the girl, evidently being somewhat mystified at her appearance and especially at her voice, which was thoroughly feminine.

"When the train left Naples," continued the woman, "was there not a man in this compartment?"

Lita, whose eye was fixed on the bandit, saw his fingers twitching. She interpreted it to mean that she must reply in the negative.

"There was no one, signora, except we who are now here."

There was a pocket in the woman's dress, and Lita noticed that she kept her right hand in this pocket. When she asked the question she looked at the figure leaning back in the corner, apparently asleep.

"Signora," called the new passenger, "can you tell me the hour this train reaches Rome?"

The only reply was a snore.

Lita would have warned the woman that the person she addressed was a man and a bandit and begged her to let him alone, fearing that he would murder them both, but she dared not do so. The woman made no further attempt to extract information from the sleeper; instead she began to look Lita over, her attention being riveted on the girl's figure that looked different from a man's.

"You're not a man," she said; "you're a woman."

Lita made no reply. The man in the corner snored on. The woman turned her attention to the sleeper.

"Signora!"

The man stirred, then asked what was wanted in a feigned voice.

"At what hour does this train reach Rome?"

"I do not know."

"What's the matter with your voice? Have you got a cold?"

"Pardon me. I am sleepy. I have been up very late every night for a week."

"Was there a man in this compartment when the train left Naples?"

"Yes; the young gentleman opposite you."

"She's not a man; she's a woman."

"Well, I have nothing to do with that, nor do I care what she is."

This was said angrily, and the bandit, losing control of his voice, betrayed his rage. Suddenly the woman's hand came out of her pocket and with it a cocked revolver, with which she covered the bandit.

"Throw up your hands, Andrea Carpi!"

The hands went up at once. The woman leaned forward and snatched away the veil.

"You are very smart, Signor Carpi, but you can't fool us carabinieri all the time. I thought that by changing sex I could bag you and have succeeded. I see that you have changed clothes with this young lady."

He threw off his cloak and displayed the uniform of the national police.

Lita breathed a breath of relief. She regained her clothes, and the bandit returned with his captor by the next train to Naples.
